Kerry Daud

Head of Faculty – eLearning, Research, Technology and Design, St Margaret’s Anglican Girls School

Kerry Daud is a visionary educator transforming learning through digital innovation at St Margaret’s Anglican Girls School in Brisbane. With a Master’s in Education focused on Innovative Learning Design, Kerry has pioneered groundbreaking initiatives including the phenomenally successful Girls in Gaming program. As a champion for technological advancement in education, Kerry developed M@ggies Digital, an online hub providing teacher training and student resources for the ethical integration of AI in learning. Her expertise has been recognised internationally, with presentations at conferences across Australia and the United States, including the International Coalition of Girls’ Schools Conference 2023 and Australia’s EDUTech 2024.

Kerry’s influence extends through her involvement in the Queensland Schools Network for Emerging Technologies (QLDSNET) and her selection as a research fellow in the International Coalition of Girls’ Schools Global Action Research Collaborative. Kerry continues to push boundaries in educational innovation while maintaining her commitment to inclusivity and ethical technology use, earning recognition on The Educator’s Most Influential Educator 2025 and Hot List in 2022 and the 2025 TeachX recipient of the Merline Muldoon Memorial Award for Innovation in Teaching.
